Celtic Nationalism

There's no question about it. Celtic culture is in danger of extinction. Despite Welsh nationalism, Cornish revivalism, attempts to preserve Irish and Scots Gaelic, Bretonne and Galician, our culture is being overrun by the non-Celtic majority. How can we reverse this trend? What we need is a pan-Celtic nationalism, with a largely contiguous homeland – like Britain, for example.

This seems like a pipedream because there is an indigenous non-Celtic population in most of Britain which will certainly resist, and which would at present be supported in its resistance by the US and the EU. So we require a narrative which makes the unthinkable imaginable and even desirable. Let's set this out in a book called The Celtic State. There follows a summary of our recommendations.

- Mythologise Celtic victimhood, based of course on the real Celtic experience of oppression. This will then become an unquestionable scripture. Anyone challenging it will be accused of revisionism and anti-Celticism. If they themselves are Celtic accuse them of Celtic self-hatred.
- Develop a unified Celtic language and make its use mandatory.
- Revive Druidism and give it the role of establishing who is a Celt and of ensuring the purity of the race.
- Denigrate the non-Celtic population in Britain, portraying them as uncivilised, economically profligate, oppressive, violent, colonialist, pro-Nazi, monarchist, anti-democratic, part of a European plot to undermine the US etc. etc.
- Glorify the Celtic past of Britain, and compare it unfavourably with what followed. Revive the old Celtic place names (like Pengwern for Shrewsbury) and encourage archeological research which emphasises Celtic remains such as Hollingbury Fort in Brighton. Point out that the uncivilised Anglo-Saxons and Norsemen only came to Britain because it was a flourishing Celtic culture. Their true homelands are North Germany and Scandinavia to which they should return. Tell the Americans Celtic Britain will be a bulwark against an increasingly islamised Europe – cite Turkey's application to join EU.
- Develop an international propaganda network to disseminate this narrative, using the Celtic disapora for this purpose. It is particularly important to indoctrinate your own people with these ideas. They must be encouraged to see them as an inseparable part of their identity without which they would be exposed to every kind of insecurity. Irish-Americans will play a crucial role in enlisting US support and thus tipping of the military balance in your favour. They therefore need to be the primary focus of your propaganda efforts. All counter arguments must be discredited, all supporting arguments augmented into unanswerable truths.
- Once the Celticist narrative has been established and successfully disseminated, start strategic Celtic colonisation of non-Celtic areas either by buying up land, or simply by squatting on it and terrorising the local population.
- Refuse to mix with the non-Celtic people, either by employing them, tolerating intermarriage or admitting them to any Celtic organisations such as trades unions.
- Use the expected resistance to this whole process – which you must always describe as terrorist – to your advantage. Each act of resistance should be met with overkill and can be used to increase the area under your control and to destroy the economy and infrastructure (including housing) of the non-Celtic population.

- Using this reasoning, fund hard-line organisations which oppose you and which also oppose the British government's willingness to negotiate a settlement; you have no interest in a peaceful resolution until the non-Celtic population has been eliminated. Assassinate much admired British leaders in order to maximse the resistance, even though you know that this will cost many Celtic lives. These are expendible in the greater scheme of things; the greater the resistance the faster the colonisation.
- When the US leadership is ready, declare a Celtic British state, based on the principles of Celticism. This is likely to cause a war in which the EU will support the non-Celtic Brits. Use this to expel as much of the non-Celtic population as possible and to demonise Europe. Declare the right of the Celtic diaspora to return to the homeland, and deny this right to those non-Celts who have been expelled. Discriminate against the remaining non-Celtic population in such a way that they consider leaving. It may eventually be necessary to expel them, probably when there is another war.
- Ignore all international treaties, conventions, resolutions, declarations of human rights etc. which stand in the way of Celticism. All you need to do is ensure that the US leadership is on your side. When you are accused of contravening acceptable behaviour obfuscate the argument with legalistic mumbo-jumbo, and if this doesn't work, accuse your detractors of much worse breaches of human rights, and, of course, of anti-Celticism.
- Once you have established your state, you can think about expansion. This will best be achieved in conjunction with the US. With the military power-balance in your favour it should prove easy to redraw boundaries simply by erecting barriers well into the enemy's territory and evicting the population your side of the barriers.
- Finally, remember that you and your people must hate your enemy even when you find it expedient to use the language of conciliation. Absolute ruthlessness will be required. Always remember the words of Niccolo Machivelli: '… it has to be noted that men must either be pampered or crushed, because they can get revenge for small injuries but not for fatal ones.'
